Labrador's 'Good Samaritan' Gone

Sir Wilfred Grenfell, 75, Gave Life to Poor Folk

CHARLOTTE, Vt. (AP) — Despite the death of Sir Wilfred Grenfell, the Grenfell Association planned today to continue his famed work of giving spiritual comfort and medical care to the fisher folk, Indians and Eskimos of Labrador.

Even before he died here yesterday at the age of 75 years, the association had stated that "so long as hard-working people need the services it can give, the Grenfell Association hopes to carry on the work its founder started for those human beings who are our blood brothers."

While funeral plans were incomplete, family sources said the body probably would be cremated and the ashes taken to Labrador to be interred near St. Anthony's Hospital, near those of Lady Grenfell, who died two years ago.

UNDER PHYSICIAN'S CARE

Sir Wilfred completed games of croquet on the lawn of his summer home on the shore of Lake Champlain a short time before his death. He had been under treatment for a heart ailment for several years.

Born in England, he was knighted by King George V in 1927 in recognition of his missionary work. After leaving Oxford and the London Hospital, he expected as a young man to begin practice as a doctor in London.

However, he joined an expedition that sailed from London in 1892 aboard a 90-ton ketch, the Albert, fitted with a hospital ward and dispensary, to investigate conditions among the fishermen of Labrador and northern Newfoundland for the Royal National Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen.

So engrossed did he become with the work to be done there that he abandoned all thoughts of a London practice and stayed on the coast 43 years before retiring. Sir Wilfred is survived by two

British Fliers Make Daylight Raids on Nazi Centres

R.A.F. Blasts German Destroyers, Railways

LONDON (CP) — Increasing the scope of its counter-blows against Germany to include daylight as well as night raids, the Royal Air Force today announced raids deep into Germany and occupied areas, and new setbacks to the functioning of the German war machine.

The Air Ministry issued today said:

"A couple of men chatting on a country road apparently started this popular movement, and for 30 miles as we flew across the fields men and women stopped working to wave their handkerchiefs."

"A daylight attack also was made on shipping at Le Havre. One of our aircraft has not ish markings and low enough to see them waving.

"Royal Air Force bombers made daylight attacks on an oil plant at Hamburg, on barges and bridges at the canal junction at Anna Paulowna south of Eider (in Holland), on railway sidings near Warendorf, and Hornburg and the Texel airfield.

"A daylight attack also was made on shipping at Le Havre. One of our aircraft has not reported to its base.

"During the night our bombers, although hampered by severe weather conditions, carried out attacks on widespread industrial and military objectives in Germany and enemy-occupied territory.

KRUPPS HIT AGAIN

"The industrial targets included an oil plant and munitions factory at Cologne, the aluminum works at Grevenbroich, the Krupp works at Essen and an electric power station at Reisholz.

"Railway communications and goods yards at Gremberg, Cologne, Konigsbachen, Dusseldorf, Wesel and Brussels and several enemy airfields also were bombed.

"One of our aircraft has not reported to its base."

BERLIN (AP) — The German

high command's communiqué today said:

"Property damage inflicted by bombs dropped at night by enemy fliers in western Germany and the occupied area could be quickly repaired. Some apartment houses were destroyed and one farm building was burned."

Famous Spots in British Capital Damaged50 London Areas Hit by Bombs in Raid

LONDON (CP) — Today's air raid alarms in London and other parts of England followed the longest and one of the worst all-night raids the capital has experienced since the war started.

Most of the damage in the capital was inflicted before midnight. A famous church, one of the city's oldest hospitals, a promenade known the world over, hospitals and several internationally known buildings were struck.

While this was going on German airplanes also dropped incendiary and high explosive bombs in other parts of Britain. Three women were feared killed in an East Anglia town to which a number of persons had been removed from London. One bomb made a direct hit on the home where they were staying. Nine other women injured in the home were not expected to live.

Casualty List Found To Be Small

More than 50 districts of London were hit, but a government communiqué said reports indicated the casualty list was "small."

The government said fires in the city and in suburban areas "were promptly dealt with and all were brought under control. At several points houses were hit and some industrial premises were damaged.

.... A number of people were injured, some fatally, in a building in London which was hit by high explosive bombs. No reports of any large number of persons killed or injured have been received from any quarter."

In the Epping district of Essex, Prime Minister Churchill's constituency northeast of London, an anti-aircraft battery brought down a raider in full view of the Prime Minister. The plane was hit at great height, but searchlights picked out three parachuting Nazi fliers and followed them to earth.

A high explosive bomb sliced off the corner of a London hotel, but only two persons were injured, most of the occupants having sought safety in a basement shelter.

Number of Deaths In Raid Shelter

An undisclosed number of persons was killed when a bomb scored a direct hit on an air raid shelter—situated in the only piece of open ground in a congested district. Houses in the surrounding area were undamaged.

A street surface shelter also was demolished, but it was unoccupied.

Among the damaged buildings were a bank and another hotel, where several employees and a guest were injured.

A twin-engined Junkers 88 bomber was shot down by anti-aircraft fire at Primrose Hill.

In one residential area where houses were demolished by a salvo of bombs a mother and her son were killed after leaving their garden shelter to make a cup of tea.

Bomb Breaks Bus Drivers' Leg

One big London bus was upset by a bomb hit which injured a number of passengers and broke the driver's leg. A passing doctor borrowed a policeman's tin hat and set to work treating the victim.

A passenger on another bus, describing a direct hit, said:

"Our driver decided to make for the nearest shelter when things became too hot. We made the archway in front of a building. Then we heard the bombs coming down."

"Most of us were able to fling ourselves to the ground, but some were thrown into the air and against the building.

"Paving blocks, glass and bomb fragments were strewn over a wide area."

A pedestrian who was posting some letters had them jerked from his hand. He later found them undamaged, scattered 50 yards away.

Three air raid wardens and a woman were killed in one London district where debris smashed a surface shelter.

In the city, the anti-aircraft gunners gave the people one display of accuracy by shooting out nine of 11 flares dropped by the enemy in one district.

3 Lose Lives In South Wales

Three persons were killed in a house Wales town during the night. One bomb hit a hotel, where a maid was rescued after being trapped for an hour.

"There was a terrible noise," she said, "and the building seemed to fall on top of me. My legs were pinned by heaps of bricks and I barely could move my head."

In a Welsh mining district bombs demolished the home of a woman and her three children. The children escaped with cuts and bruises but the mother was buried beneath the debris.

Incendiary bombs dropped in seven northwest England residential districts caused a number of casualties, two of which were fatal.

A children's sanatorium in northwest England was set afire by incendiary bombs and a high explosive missile blasted a crater in the grounds, but there were no direct hits.

"At sea an enemy merchant ship of about 4,000 tons was hit amidships by several bombs. It stopped motionless and was burning and listing. Submarines sank two armed enemy merchantmen.

"The opponent yesterday lost 10 planes, one of which was by anti-aircraft fire. Four German planes are missing."

(Three British planes were lost yesterday, one over Britain and two on offensive operations against the enemy.)

Officials Probe Trip Of Interned Priests

STE. ANNE DE BEAUPRE, Que. (CP) — Seven German priests and as many German brothers, held in an internment camp in eastern Canada, paid a visit to the shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre, it has been learned.

A priest at the shrine said the group, accompanied by six Canadian army officers, made the trip by bus last Tuesday and were guests of the Redemptorist fathers for several hours.

The British forces, reinforced by Australian, New Zealand and Free French troops, are confident they can throw back such an offensive.

Despite predictions of the Fascist press that Italy would oust Britain from the Mediterranean on her entrance into the war last June 10, Britain still holds both ends of what Italian call "mare nostrum" (our sea) and has disrupted communications between Italy and Libya.

Thus far Italy's only territorial gain in Africa has been British Somaliland and a narrow strip along the Egyptian coast 70 miles long.

The Italians were permitted to advance into Egypt as far as Sidi Barrani in line with the British decision to choose their own defense lines and the knowledge that the farther east the Italians are extended the farther they will be from their bases.

Japanese Apologize

SHANGHAI (AP)—The incident of September 28, in which Japanese police arrested and beat a sailor from the United States cruiser Augusta, was regarded as closed by the U.S. navy today as a result of a formal apology from the commander of the Japanese gendarmerie.

The navy announced that Admiral Thomas G. Hart, commander of the U.S. Asiatic fleet, had received a letter from Major General Miura, head of the Japanese police in Shanghai, expressing regret for the "unwarrantable conduct" of his men.

that for a time I could see nothing.

"I suppose the damage might have been worse, but it was quite bad enough."

"The cross and candlesticks went from the high altar. The cross was particularly beautiful."

MAIN FABRIC UNDAMAGED

An air ministry and ministry of home security communiqué said:

"During a recent attack on London an enemy aircraft dropped a bomb on St. Paul's Cathedral, piercing the roof at the east end of the cathedral and destroying the high altar.

"The main fabric of the cathedral was not affected, nor was the choir damaged and no one was injured."

"The crash came suddenly," he said. "I hurried upstairs, but the place was so thick with dust the double eastern roof, a little distance from the great dome, which distinguishes the cathedral.

It ripped a hole through the upper roof of lead and rafters and tore great blocks of masonry from the main roof beneath. These blocks crashed 90 feet onto the high altar.

Concussion buckled the heavy lead roofing away from the rafters as much as two feet. Showers of splintered wood and pieces of stone fell on other ledges below.

Nothing was left of the high altar save a heap of stones. Thick dust lay everywhere. Furniture, carpets and cushions were thrown about and some of the chapter seats were smashed.

The bishop's chair was flung against one of the wrought-iron sanctuary gates, where it leaned crookedly, with some of its carvings badly scarred.

Two immense bronze candlesticks, copies of originals now in the cathedral at Ghent, stood upright, but one had shifted and lost its candle. The famous Gibbons' choir stalls showed no sign of damage, but were grey with dust.

Overhead, daylight shone through the jagged hole, which extended to the edge of one of the three saucer-shaped domes and part of the dome's mosaic decoration was broken away and bits lay in the rubble on the floor.

St. Paul's is one of London's most historic landmarks. Erected in 1675-1697, it is considered one of the finest specimens of Renaissance architecture in England.

Saved Sept. 15
By Davies Squad

MENACED BY NEARBY FIRES early in the massed air attacks on London, the cathedral was saved from possible damage September 15 by "suicide squad," which unearthed a 1,000-pound time bomb nearby.

The bomb was removed after four days and nights of digging, trundled away and exploded harmlessly in the Hackney marshes.

A Canadian, Lieut. Robert Davies, formerly of St. Catharines, Ont., directed the crew. The dean of St. Paul's, Very Rev. W. R. Matthew, declared "the whole nation owes a debt of gratitude to the crew."

Lieut. Davies was decorated with the George Cross.

St. Paul's was bolstered up in 1925 with steel bands and concrete pillars to enable the dome to withstand the vibration of heavy street traffic. The grimy church stands atop Ludgate Hill.

"On the contrary, if a handful of men do not accept defeat then everything is to be hoped for."

The Cameroons, he concluded, "will have a place in the history of this war and in the history of the nation."

WILDLY CHEERED

For a moment there was silence. Then the crowds surging on to the pier broke into a wild clamor.

While members of the expedition were debarking, Gen. de Gaulle, who has been administering the Free French fight against Germany from London, drove through the densely-packed streets of the befuddled city to the governor's palace.

There he was presented to local officials and native chieftains, many of whom had come from Senegal, Dahomey and the Ivory Coast to join his flight.

In presenting Gen. de Gaulle, Governor-General Leclerc said: "I have not promised the people of the Cameroons an easy life, but rather one of sacrifice. There are no weak hearts here. We are men of firm resolution. Cameroon is ready for all eventualities."

Others Expected To Follow Lead

Gen. de Gaulle replied: "Cameroon has set a magnificent example already, followed by a number of colonies, and others will follow."

Formerly Held By Germany

The Cameroons, bounded on the south and east by French Equatorial Africa, constituted a German protectorate from 1884 to 1919. By the Treaty of Versailles, Germany relinquished sovereignty, and France and Great Britain were given mandates to administer the country.

The area under French mandate comprises about 160,000 square miles, with a population estimated at 2,500,000. It has been governed as a separate entity, with administrative and fiscal autonomy, by a commissioner, aided by a council, responsible to the French government. The seat of government is at Yaounde.

The country's resources are mainly agricultural. There are neither minerals nor manufacturing.

The part under British mandate covers 33,705 square miles with a population of about 677,000.

Gen. de Gaulle announced on August 29 that the French Cameroons and Congo had entered the war on Britain's side, opening a wide corridor from the south Atlantic to Italian Libya, and creating a land bridge from the Atlantic to the Red Sea and the Mediterranean.

The board yesterday received the report of J. M. Stewart, coal administrator, and F. G. Neate, technical adviser, who returned to Ottawa from an investigation of the market situation in respect to coal at Port William and Port Arthur.

Previously the De Gaulle headquarters in London had received the support of the French colonies of New Caledonia in the Pacific, Tahiti, the New Hebrides, and French Equatorial Africa, and of Frenchmen in Australia, Egypt and India.

Nazis Spend Billion On Baby Drive

BERLIN—The marriage loans which the Nazis grant as part of their program for raising the German birth rate have been extended to 1,600,000 couples and have reached a total value of 1,000,000,000 marks, according to the Deutsche Steuer Zeitung.

Further loans are being granted at the rate of 20,000 a month, the Steuer Zeitung says.

The Nazis have made it easier for young couples to obtain loans since the war began, because the Berlin Borsen Zeitung says: "A war necessarily brings with it the loss of valuable blood which must be compensated for to the fullest possible extent. Precisely during the war, therefore, increased importance attaches to the encouragement of big families."

For Our Security

WHEN THE DOMINION GOVERNMENT passed the Order-in-Council providing the machinery to register all guns in the hands of potential enemies of Canada it did not contemplate a procedure that would leave loopholes for evasion. And when Attorney-General Wismer took the additional authority to collect all firearms in the hands of Orientals and certain other nationals in British Columbia he reflected the wishes of all our people. But when the Vancouver Daily Province implies that the chief law officer of the Crown is about to institute an "immensely irritating and even violent policy" to make sure that nobody escapes the provisions of the federal Order-in-Council or the more precise requirements of the provincial decree conforming to the Wismer internal security plan, we fear it reads into a statement recently issued by the Attorney-General something which is not there—or, at least, not as our contemporary interprets it. It objects to the house-to-house canvass by members of the Civilian Protection Warden Service, finding in this process "the suggestion of a vast and highly-dubious enterprise that is not justified in all its possibilities of mischievous official interference with harmless private lives by any existing danger to the safety of the community of British Columbia." The Province then proceeds:

"It is hard to believe that a man of Mr. Wismer's general good sense can seriously contemplate such a revolutionary procedure on such flimsy justification. It is quite certain that the vast majority of the people of British Columbia have neither any illegal firearms in their possession nor have failed to register them. It would be an intolerable invasion of the constitutional liberties of these people to subject them to a forcible invasion of their households. There should at least be several decent and orderly preliminaries to forcible search and seizure of any body or anything on this account."

It would seem logical to suppose that if Mr. Wismer were to accept the situation as it now exists, many guns would remain unregistered in dangerous hands, constituting a menace to the public safety. To this the Attorney-General does not propose to consent; first, because it would defeat the original plan which the Dominion government considered both sound and urgent; secondly, because the insufficiency in numbers of uniformed police obliges him to turn over the task in its preliminary stages to the voluntary organization now established. We agree with our contemporary, however, that this is a procedure requiring tact and judgment. Properly authorized as special policemen, these men will ask for information about firearms, and, at the request of the Dominion authorities, as to national registration. Patriotic citizens will recognize their duty.

No loyal British Columbian who is especially anxious for the province's security will object to answering questions in a matter of such seriousness. No search of premises, as the Attorney-General points out, will be necessary if friendly co-operation be forthcoming. But in cases where there is thought to be ground for suspicion, the volunteer worker can report, and it then will be the duty of regular police officers to proceed under the authority of both federal and provincial decree. But what Mr. Wismer is emphatically desirous of avoiding, of course, is a state of affairs which Norway might have escaped if action had been taken to deal with the Fifth Columnists before Quisling and Company had undermined the security of the nation.

In Full Charge

ONE PART OF MR. CHURCHILL'S OBSERVATIONS as he accepted the leadership of the Conservative Party of Great Britain yesterday should be carefully noted. It is this: "I will venture most humbly to submit and also to declare, because it springs most deeply from convictions of my heart, that at all times according to my lights and throughout the changing scenes through which we are all hurried, I have always faithfully served two public causes which I think stand supreme—maintenance of the enduring greatness of Britain and her Empire and the historical continuity of our island life."

As we said in these columns the other day, "although Mr. Churchill wears the Conservative label, he is a political rebel... inasmuch as he sets his public course only as he interprets public interest." From time to time some of his traducers have called him a political chameleon—both in humorous and captious vein. But he almost invariably has changed his party color with warm personal conviction. The assault of the tariff reformers on the poor man's food at the beginning of the century drove him from the Conservative fold into the arms of the Liberal-Free traders; he championed the public interest with all the fervor of his being and all the eloquence he could command. His postwar political eclipse, his emergence as constructive if trenchant critic of successive Conservative governments, and his rise to the Premiership bear witness to his rebellious mind spirit.

The Prime Minister is an official Conservative and represents the Young Division of Conservative in the House of Commons. Until his elevation to its leadership yesterday, however, he held no executive position in the party. Under such circumstances, as head of the government counting on the votes of more than 300 straight Tory members, he had occupied a somewhat anomalous position ever since he took office last May 10. True, he commanded the respect and confidence of practically the whole House—to say nothing of the whole country—but he was obviously answerable to the inner council of the Conservative Party under the leadership of Mr. Chamberlain. In other words, not only was he obliged to consult the feelings of the hierarchy on such matters as ministerial changes, but government policy as a whole naturally could not be decided without formal reference to or the approval of that body.

As leader of the Conservative Party, however, Mr. Churchill is now in a position to command the support of the great majority of the House of Commons to do what he considers to be in the best interests of the nation and the Empire. Moreover, if he feels like removing from his ministry those of its members who once belonged to the small but influential group of appeasers, his authority cannot be seriously challenged. Whether Conservatism, or Toryism, will fit into the postwar order need not be discussed now. But the Prime Minister still remains a political rebel and the inspiring head of a really representative national government committed to one job—that of winning the war.

Italian Humor

OUR NEIGHBOR ON THE SOUTH WILL never have any justification for complaining that she did not know of the magnificent promises Italy made to her as the price of her neutrality in the present conflict. Mussolini's Il Popolo d'Italia and its military commentator Mario Appelius did an excellent job yesterday with a fresh barrage of "ifs." First of all, the Washington government was warned that "new heavy blows" were about to be inflicted on Britain with the intervention of fresh forces, then it was told what the United States stood to gain by remaining out of the war, and, finally, what choices were left to her:

1. Remain neutral until the complete destruction of the British Empire and then take her place as its "natural heir"—with Canada, Newfoundland, the Bahamas, Bermuda and Jamaica as her "expectations."
2. To continue to aid Britain without intervening in the war and find herself in an "inferior diplomatic condition" when the British Empire is "split up" at a Peace conference, as well as in future trade agreements.
3. To enter the war "knowing she is not militarily ready, and meet all the consequences of defeat."

For the better assurance of those who are guiding the destinies of the puny and powerless nation on the south of us, the nation with the trifling population of 130,000,000, the nation with all the resources in Nature's catalogue, Signor Appelius reminds Mr. Roosevelt and his colleagues that if their country is really wise enough to remain neutral, there is just the possibility that Australia and New Zealand would be added to the loot for good measure. (We hope Japan does not see this and detect the fine Italian hand of Mussolinian duplicity so soon after the reaffirmation of unity in the triple alliance. For we really thought Oceania would be Nippon's "plum" after the "removal" of the British Empire.)

Perhaps it is good that in these dark days there should come a little unconscious humor out of the sunny skies of Italy. But Mussolini had better be less liberal with his use of "ifs" and promises and threats if he really wants a shock-proof world to refrain from laughing itself to death. He might drop the hint to Signor Appelius, incidentally, that Brooklyn Bridge is definitely not within totalitarian gift. He must draw the line somewhere.

The Nazis, writhing under British air attacks, say the R.A.F. is making little attempt to concentrate on military objectives. Of course, Nazi raiders are guilty only of poor marksmanship.

Described as "over-ingenuous" and sentenced to four years in prison is the German inventor who advertised an unrationed substitute for silk stockings, then sent his mail-order customers greasepaint with which to decorate their legs. A stiff sentence for being "over-ingenuous." Is it possible he was really punished for a much more serious crime in Nazi eyes; that of having a sense of humor?

CANADA ON GUARD

From New York Times

No more graceful and useful gesture in recent Canadian-American history has been made than the recent press tour of Canadian defence officials...

It is clear that a good deal of work will be required to synchronize the defence programs of the two countries. Standardization of specifications for military, naval and air equipment is obviously desirable. Not only would such standardization add Canada in her mighty war effort; it would facilitate the mutual defense of North America.

Nor should our mutual efforts be limited to military co-operation. Economically the same raw materials and industries support us both.

In this field there is one step that can properly be taken without loss of time. The requirement of our State Department, announced earlier this year, that Canadian visitors to the United States must have passports, was an obvious mistake. While it is important to bar undesirable aliens, the economic loss sustained in the free interchange between the two countries is far more obvious than the gain achieved. The passport requirement should be rescinded, and every effort should be made to correlate and complement the activities of the two nations.

Dorothy Thompson

WHEN GERMANY broke out into National Socialism the greatest and most widespread error, sedulously cultivated by the Nazis themselves, was to regard it wholly as a counter-revolutionary movement.

It was this misconception that led to a serious underrating of its power, which lay in the fact that it was riding a revolution ary wave.

Hitler himself was carried by this wave. There is nothing in "Mein Kampf," in the field of economics and sociology, that would not be acceptable to a progressive republic. To be sure, the famous 14 points of the National Socialist program formulated a revolt against the banks and against the concentration of industry. They were addressed primarily to a disgruntled and impoverished lower middle class. They were never realized.

The Hitler movement started as a Pan-German revival, and as such it received its first support from the Reichswehr, which throughout the republic, was secretly arming and, through hidden funds, secretly subsidizing "patriotic" societies.

But, once in power, National Socialism found itself riding the revolutionary wave. Like all tyrants, who were able advisedly to turn their backs on Machiavelli, Hitler found that he must base his power on the masses, and he did so by the accepted formula of terror in one hand and a gift in the other.

Rapidly the two most powerful elements in the Nazi set-up became the Gestapo (which, among other things, has established a sort of block-by-block Gallup poll as a current and continual check on public sentiment) and the Labor Front, which became progressively radical.

SUBTLY, THEN, and bit by bit, the Nazi military program, in the propaganda attending it, threw off the Pan-German emphasis and presented itself as the "Liberator" of Europe and the harbinger of Socialism and totalistic unity.

The campaign against Communism became, in the twinkling of an eye after the signing of the Russo-German pact, a campaign against the "pluto" democracies, and in this campaign the Nazis were not in the least averse to taking over the frustrated hopes of "crackpot" liberals and presenting themselves as the would-be creators of a United States of Europe.

1. Remain neutral until the complete destruction of the British Empire and then take her place as its "natural heir"—with Canada, Newfoundland, the Bahamas, Bermuda and Jamaica as her "expectations."

2. To continue to aid Britain without intervening in the war and find herself in an "inferior diplomatic condition" when the British Empire is "split up" at a Peace conference, as well as in future trade agreements.

3. To enter the war "knowing she is not militarily ready, and meet all the consequences of defeat."

For the better assurance of those who are guiding the destinies of the puny and powerless nation on the south of us, the nation with the trifling population of 130,000,000, the nation with all the resources in Nature's catalogue, Signor Appelius reminds Mr. Roosevelt and his colleagues that if their country is really wise enough to remain neutral, there is just the possibility that Australia and New Zealand would be added to the loot for good measure. (We hope Japan does not see this and detect the fine Italian hand of Mussolinian duplicity so soon after the reaffirmation of unity in the triple alliance. For we really thought Oceania would be Nippon's "plum" after the "removal" of the British Empire.)

But now a new tactic asserts itself. It is whispered around that "Hitler is not immortal. His regime is not immortal. He will bring about the unity of Europe and the unity of the whole world. Then, with the end of world anarchy, a new age of freedom and democracy will dawn."

WHAT WILL DAWN will be the greatest system of monopolistic state capitalism that the human mind can conceive, with all Europe organized like a gigantic Ford factory, and by sheer monopolistic economic power putting the screws on everybody, including us.

But the whispering campaign goes on among the masses in all countries, and it is effective. Nothing the Nazis could do would be more effective.

THE GREATEST ALLIES of that campaign are and have been the status quo supporters—those, unfortunately, in positions of influence and power in all countries—who cannot conceive any better political organization of the world than that of circa 1919; nor of any better economic organization of the world than that of circa 1929. These oppose the Nazi fake revolution, which, nevertheless, has shrewdly exploited the latent discontent, by a counter-revolution which the intelligence of the world rejects.

Deficient in imagination, desperately hanging on to what they have, nostalgically yearning for a status quo which has been exploding for 10 years all over the place, these, whether they are American isolationists or British elder statesmen, or French "safety-first" retreaters, creep into air shelters which they have built in their minds, and hope, with not a shred of reason, that they will somehow keep the best of all possible worlds.

AT THEIR MERCY

From Richmond Times-Dispatch

Spain has just come through a bloody civil war which cost her a million casualties. We know what hot, smoldering resentments remain hidden under the ashes of civil war. There must be millions of Spaniards who despise Franco more than they do any foreigner. Yet Spain is being wheedled by the Axis partners into again embarking on a war.

This mentality which loses wars by losing its grip on all the vital forces that believe in the future, not in the past. That mentality wrecked France and almost destroyed Britain. Now, in Britain, a great change is taking place. It is that change which may make it possible to draw victory out of defeat.

Mr. Kremlin himself was distinguished for ignorance, for he had only one idea, and that was wrong.—Durrall.

Parallel Thoughts

A good name is better than precious ointment; and the day of death than the day of birth. Ecclesiastes 7:1.

A virtuous name is the precious, only good, for which queens and peasants' wives must come together.—Sallust.

Elmore Philpott

THE INEXTINGUISHABLE DOWN through the ages, Hitler comes and go. Napoleon's finish at St. Helena. Some get time to think things over. "How is it?" Napoleon asked, when his last lingering hope of restored power was gone "that men will die for this Jesus, who has been dead 2,000 years, when they won't lift a finger for me while I am still alive?"

If all the Christian world would really pray, even in the silence of its inmost heart, that God would show us the way not just to save ourselves in this war as we saved our army at Dunkirk, but to order all the world for peace as Jesus said it should be ordered, it might at least begin to be left to look at itself in the mirror, without shame.

In those moments, I believe, people everywhere began to hear the still small voice which said that all men were men, and not just Britishers, Americans, Russians or Germans.

But, once in power, National Socialism found itself riding the revolutionary wave. Like all tyrants, who were able advisedly to turn their backs on Machiavelli, Hitler found that he must base his power on the masses, and he did so by the accepted formula of terror in one hand and a gift in the other.

DEATH FOR TRAITORS

FOR ONCE IN MY life I agree wholeheartedly with a speech by the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett. When he warned the Empire on recently that it was the height of suicidal folly to take only half-measures against the Fifth Column, he was, of course, referring to the long suppressed allegation of treachery in high places in Britain. But his warning should help to wake us up here too in Canada.

Hitter in his memoirs told how he first realized that he would eventually control Germany. When they had him in prison, caught in the act of violent treason against the state, the authorities treated him as a privileged guest. "I knew I would beat them in the end as soon as I saw they were afraid to shoot me," is the way he has put it himself.

The lesson of Kerensky in Russia is equally plain. Kerensky was the typical middle-of-the-road man, whose oratorical ability enabled him to take over Russia after the putrid and treacherous Czarist regime had collapsed. But Kerensky made the mistake of imagining that oratory was enough when the old order was crashing in ruins and nothing resting on stable force had yet emerged. So a tiny handful of Reds, who knew exactly what they wanted, and how they proposed to get it, finally seized control of all Russia. When you are dealing with tough customers you have to be tough and fast.

SAD WORDS

I HAVE HEARD nothing sadder than the words of one French cabinet minister on the day that France decided to sue for peace: "The struggle was decided by machinery and treachery, and France was no match for Germany in either." Actually that is just another way of saying that Germany mobilized not only planes and tanks, but also French traitors on her side.

We can leave the British traitors, if any, to people like Winston Churchill and Anthony Eden. But for one would feel a lot more confidence if tough old Lloyd George were in the cabinet at this particular time. Or if Tories are demanded I think R. B. Bennett would make a wonderful secretary of civil service in this crisis. Our job is with Canada.

There are some people in Canada who are not even bothering to conceal their delight at Hitler's progress to date. Most of these are alien born; some are British born, some native Canadians sons. We should be under no illusions as to the implication of such manifestations. It can happen here as it has happened everywhere else.

Opposite

From London Spectator

The English attitude of mind towards the French at the present time is of exceptional interest. Those whose opinion has always been: "Never trust a Froggy" are inevitably wagging their tails; they have always had their stubborn counterparts in France, and their generalization is directly translatable as "Perfidie Albion!" On the other hand, a French lady who escaped from Bordeaux with her children has told me that she has been astonished by the sympathy, the kindness, and the absence of reproach against her country, that she has everywhere encountered in England. Our common soldiers appear to have smilingly and without bitterness written off the temporary loss of an ally.

School Board BriefsAdd Rifle Range At Victoria High

Construction of another rifle range to increase the shooting facilities already available in the High School attic, was authorized by the City School Board last night on the recommendation of Trustee F. G. Mulliner's building and grounds committee.

The board also approved the committee's suggestion to purchase $230 worth of equipment to improve school floors, desks and other furniture, agreed to purchase a dozen Kelley toilets from Andrew Sheret Limited, at $29.85 apiece, to build a $175 porch on the Burnside auditorium and to transplant some of the shrubs at Sir James Douglas to Margaret Jenkins School, where auditorium ventilation will also be improved.

The committee reported reconditioning of 140 High School lockers and three flights of stairs, completion of a sidewalk for Burnside, where the new heating system is operating satisfactorily, and stated the South Park playing field had been graded and seeded.

Accounts of $5,533.15 were approved on the recommendation of the finance committee, which reported 75 students from outside districts were attending Victoria High School, including 18 from Craigflower, 16 from Langford, 15 from Colwood, and 9 from Happy Valley.

Use of a Victoria West schoolroom was granted to the Civilian Protection Committee without charge to permit it to conduct first aid classes each Monday evening.

SCHOOL PATROLS CONSIDERED

Restoration of school patrols will be considered by the board in view of the amount of damage being done at the various schools. Trustee Mulliner reported windows broken at Victoria High, South Park, Bank Street, Quadra and Sir James Douglas.

Recommendations covering the retirement of W. Burns, gardener, on December 31, and C. A. Raine, of the janitorial staff, on June 30 of next year, were endorsed.

Purchase of 200 chairs at $1.50 each from David Spencer Ltd. was authorized.

Owing to heavy registrations for certain classes at the night school, Miss N. Gibson was appointed assistant in the dressmaking department, J. J. McKim in the shorthand and typing course, L. A. Campbell in woodwork and W. Crittins in diesel engineering.

The application of the K.V.'s basketball club for one of the junior high gyms for practices was declined. Another application for a floor to be used by the newly-formed bagpipe bands was received with favor.

Complaints from the Margaret Jenkins P.T.A. over the condition of the auditorium floor were referred to the building and grounds committee.

Monday, Thanksgiving Day, was declared a school holiday.

Board Chairman P. E. George was congratulated on his election to the presidency of the British Columbia School Trustee Association, and Trustee F. G. Mulliner presented a report on the activities of that body's recent convention in Nelson.

DUNCAN—Mayor Edward Lee presided over the Duncan City Council on Monday evening when a letter from the Duncan Chamber of Commerce was considered on the question of Oriental ownership of lands and filed.

The council agreed to cooperate with the director of housing in drawing up a housing survey.

The court of revision on the voters' list will be held November 15. The date for the court of revision of the assessment roll was set for February next.

Accounts totaling $1,622.50 were passed for payment.

DUNCAN—The lady members of the Cowichan Golf Club held their annual meeting Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. W. Prest presiding.

The following officers were elected: Captain, Mrs. O. Droob; secretary, Miss J. Duncan; committee, Mrs. J. B. Creighton, Mrs. H. S. Fox and Miss Doris Powell.

It was decided to hold the championship in the fall instead of in the spring.

Writes of Bombing As Strain But Endurable

The strain imposed by nightly bombing work's hardship on Londoners but they still carry on with grim determination, letters received by Mrs. A. H. Spurr of this city from her sister in London reveal. The writer is the wife of R. W. Haddon, managing director of the Farmer and Stockbreeder and Agricultural Gazette, published in London, who visited Victoria two years ago, and she is a driver in the Motor Transport Corps in the metropolis.

EVERYONE CHEERFUL

"London still carries on, and only stops while the gunfire is bad," she wrote on September 25. "Last night we were so tired we didn't go to the shelter, but went to bed and risked it, and from 9 p.m. till 4 p.m. the planes were going over our heads. But everyone is still cheerful and even after seven hours in the shelter we could hear the people going home singing."

Of another occasion she writes. "I had to take the general I am working for at the moment out to see one of our guns while a raid was on. Guns were going all round us, and as soon as I got in the grounds the soldiers made me put my tin hat on and take cover with them. I didn't enjoy the trip much."

Mr. Haddon has taken a house outside London and is going to furnish it for his staff so that they can take turns in getting a night's sleep comparatively free from bombing. Their London home is a small oasis in a desert of destruction, as whole blocks around them have been wrecked by bombs, she writes.

SAW NAZIS BAIL OUT

"Last Sunday we brought three planes down just near our HQ. I thought my last minute had come. We saw the pilots bail out, and I had to rush A.R.P. people to the scene of the burning plane two minutes after it happened. It was the most exciting moment. Pilots came down quite near and were taken prisoners. Then the reaction set in and I felt ghastly—and on top of it all we had a night of raids. However, after a rest we felt we could tackle anyone or anybody."

Considering the bombing London has had it really doesn't look bad, according to Mrs. Haddon. The demolition squads are so quick in mending the roads, etc., that it has hardly affected transportation. "Of course, everywhere you go you see a house or a building down, but it is nothing considering the raids we have had. The Hun is so foolish that he seems to go night after night dropping bombs on the same places that he has already bombed, so the damage is not so widespread as it sounds, although it's bad luck for the unfortunate who are getting it," she concludes.

MACDONALD-SMITH

Autumn flowers formed the background for the pretty ceremony at First Baptist Church last evening which united in marriage Hilda Eveline, only daughter of the late Mr. Malcolm Smith and Mrs. Smith, Quadra Street, and Mr. Angus John Macdonald, eldest son of Mr. N. P. Macdonald, View Street, and the late Mrs. Macdonald.

Capt. the Rev. G. A. Reynolds officiated and Mr. C. C. Warren played the wedding marches and accompanied Mrs. A. Coles, who sang "O Promise Me," as the register was being signed.

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. G. Fisk, an old family friend, and wore a princess frock of ivory lace with a train, long pointed sleeves and a Medici collar. Her veil of embroidered net was caught to her head with a coronet of lace mingled with clusters of orange blossoms and seed pearls, and she carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses, white carnations and heather showered with swansons.

Miss Vera Hawkins was bridesmaid, wearing a frock of pale pink net over taffeta, with an eyelet jacket, and a matching picture hat trimmed with a ribbon bow, and she carried a sheer bouquet of white chrysanthemums with pink snapdragons and carnations. Mr. Alex Macdonald supported his brother and the ushers were Mr. J. McCorkle and Mr. J. Rippingale, all members of the C.A.S.F.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the private dining room at the Dominion Hotel, where the guests were welcomed by Mrs. Smith in a smart frock of black crepe with touches of white, black accessories and a corsage bouquet of rosebuds and violets. The bride's cake centred the supper table, which was decorated with silver baskets of pink carnations and lighted pink tapers in silver candelabra. Miss Lois Shier sang "Because" during the reception. For a honeymoon on the mainland, the bride left in a grey, fur-trimmed turquoise blue coat with grey accessories and a corsage bouquet of gardenias and white heather.

Mr. and Mrs. Macdonald will make their home in Victoria.

STEVENS-STROOD

The marriage of Janet Margaret (Daisy), third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Strood, 1030 Tolmie Avenue, and Mr. Donald Alfred Woodward Stevens, second son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Stevens, 3346 Oak Street, was solemnized by Rev. G. H. Scarlett in the Church of Our Lord, Free Church of England, last evening.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length frock of white net and a hip-length veil arranged with clusters of orange blossoms and carried a red and white bouquet of roses and carnations. Attending her was her sister, Mrs. Kitty Gillies, in a coral pink frock with a short coatee, and a small white hat trimmed with coral flowers. She carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations. Mr. Jack Essler was best man.

An informal reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where yellow chrysanthemums and Michaelmas daisies made an attractive setting. The bride's cake, one of the gifts from her brother, Mr. Arthur G. Strood, stood in folds of pink tulles in the centre of the supper table, which Canadian Football Girls' Auxiliary met at the Y.M.C.A. recently, the president, Miss Mary Whyte, in the chair. The following committee was formed to cooperate with the football club in holding a dance some time in November: Mrs. W. Sturrock, Miss Adele Murdoch, Miss Mary Whyte and Mrs. Wm. Gornall. After discussing other activities for the football season, the meeting adjourned. The next meeting will be held on November 12 at the Y.M.C.A.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

People Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It. The startling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did—ever look healthy and strong, yet you can feel as if you had lead in your veins. Good blood means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen to every part of your body. And just as it takes oxygen to expand gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen in your blood to power your body and give you strong power.

Get Dr. Williams Fish Tonic today. They never fail to bring back the health and increase the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as fast as you can. And you'll be stronger and stronger. Get Dr. Williams Fish Tonic today.

Will Continue to Distribute Milk

The Dr. O. M. Jones Chapter, L.O.D.E., met at headquarters on Tuesday evening, the regent, Mrs. Wm. Ellis, presiding. A splendid report of war work during the past few weeks was read by Mrs. F. E. Dowdall, which mentioned that many knitted garments together with handkerchiefs, cigarettes and magazines had been distributed. Letters of appreciation were read, and many books were donated for the library that is being formed to replace the one now in circulation.

The various convenors made satisfactory reports of their work, and the chapter is ready to continue its work of supplying milk to the undernourished schoolchildren as soon as it is notified by the school doctor.

Mrs. Ellis was asked to represent the chapter at the provincial meeting at Chilliwack, and two new members were proposed: Mrs. Geo. Warren and Mrs. J. Matheson.

Plans for the annual parish bazaar to be held December 6 and 7, for St. Andrew's Cathedral were among the matters dealt with by the senior subdivision of the C.W.L. at their regular meeting last evening, which was presided over by Mrs. W. C. Grant; a fish pond by Miss Hare and Miss V. Babington; a doll for Christmas by Mrs. Griffaton and Mrs. P. C. Shaw; a Christmas cake by Mrs. Gillis and Mrs. Battle; fancywork by Mrs. Mc Manus; Mrs. Hornsby and Mrs. Porter; aprons by Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Hather; handkerchiefs by Mrs. Masterson and Mrs. Creel; other attractions will be managed by the Knights of Columbus, the C.Y.O. and the Junior League.

Rev. Father Gaudette, the chaplain, gave an encouraging talk to those whose services are so necessary for the league. An outline of the visits made by the Apostolic Delegate while in Victoria recently was given. A further announcement that pictures of the Eucharistic Congress held in Courtenay last June will be shown in technicolor at St. Ann's auditorium on Sunday evening, October 13, was made, and that the program will be augmented by selections by the cathedral boys' choir under the direction of Father Gaudette.

Regular hospital visiting was reported on by Mrs. Hornsby, who with Mrs. Blair Reid will continue this work for another

Two counsellors were chosen for the diocesan executive from the senior subdivision, Mrs. L. Heather of Lake Hill parish and Mrs. J. T. Kissinger. Congratulations were extended to Mrs. A. K. Love Ltd.

Rivers on her being chosen diocesan president of C.W.L.; to Mrs. Cicci of Oak Bay subdivision on the successful entertainment and to Mrs. B. Reid for the success of the recent convention. The members who had assisted with the refreshments at St. Louis College and with the afternoon tea at St. Ann's Convent were tendered hearty thanks by the meeting. Mrs. Ebba-Canavan reported on education, Miss Harriet on lay retreats and Miss Harriet of the usual 8.

O'Brien on social service. It is proposed to have a social evening following the next regular meeting.

REDS AND TIGERS alike are still talking about William Klem's calling of balls and strikes in the first world series game.

Bill Klem is 64, but he's still the best umpire in baseball.

The series just concluded was Klem's first world series appearance since 1934, when Judge Landis fined him $50 for language unbecoming an official in a chance meeting with Goose Goslin, then of the Detroit club, following their run-in in St. Louis.

Klem didn't believe he had the assessment coming, and told Ford C. Frick he would not umpire another inter-league engagement as long as Landis ran the works.

I presume Klem finally got tired of passing up the $2,500 fee and $18 a day expense account, for this year he was back for his 18th world series. No other person has appeared in as many.

Klem called balls and strikes for VFD Bill Donovan, Three-Fingered Brown and Orville Overall in 1908. His eagle eye has watched the aunts of Babe Adams, Christy Mathewson, Eddie Plank, Cobey Jack Coombs, Chief Bender, Rube Marquard, Red Ames, Smoky Joe Wood, Big Jeff Tesreau, Joe Bush, Dick Rudolph, Bill James, George Tyler, and on down the line.

Klem has schooled more good arbiters than any other man in history. He originated the system of calling balls and strikes over the catcher's shoulder nearest the batter.

Long ago, before foul lines were marked on fences, there was only a dent to show where a ball hit by Larry Doyle at the Polo Grounds, and called foul by Klem, had landed.

When Gov. John K. Tener, then president of the National League, suspected Klem might jump to the Federal League in 1914, he promised him a substantial raise in pay if he would stay in the National League. He increased Klem's annual salary $500.

The next time Tener saw Klem, his umpire looked glum.

"What's wrong, William?" he asked.

"Nothing at all, governor," replied Klem, "but to me substantial is a $1,000 word."

The year Klem made his bow in the Connecticut State League right after the turn of the century, there was quite a fuss when he tossed a couple of local players out of the game in Bridgeport.

Ankling along the street that night, he passed John L. Sullivan seated before an admiring throng on a bootblack stand in front of a saloon.

"Here comes that fresh um-pire," cracked one of the mob.

"Put it there, kid," said Sullivan, extending his mighty right hand. "You've got more guts than anybody who ever visited this town."

MEADE CLEARED

NEW YORK (AP) — The stewards of the Metropolitan Jockey Club ruled yesterday that the accident at Jamaica Monday, in which Jockey Johnny Barba, was seriously injured, "must be treated as an accident."

Barba's condition was reported in hospital today as "very poor." The stewards Tuesday ordered Jockey Don Meade off all his mounts pending further investigation of alleged rough riding. Meade, however, was not directly charged with rough work. Barba's horse went down in a mix-up near the start.

"The evidence developed," the stewards said today, "failed to prove the guilt of any rider in the race. Therefore, the incident must be treated as an accident."

Meade will return to active duty today.

6 Senior Elevens

The laurels and silverware at stake in first division of the Victoria and District Football League will be sought by six teams this year; it was learned at last night's meeting of the league.

Victoria West, Victoria City, Esquimalt and Saanich Thistles, the veterans of many years in senior competition, have re-entered. Rangers are back to take another crack at the honors. The new entry is the Royal Canadian Artillery, a club reported to be carrying good ballkicking material. They will be known as the Gunners. In action in exhibition matches last season the Gunners looked pretty good.

It is planned to start the new season on Sunday, October 20. Games will be played Saturdays and Sundays.

The October 20 game brings together Esquimalt and Rangers at Bullen Park.

Two games are listed for October 26, with R.C.A. and Victoria West meeting at Athletic Park and Victoria City and Saanich Thistles clashing at Beacon Hill.

Victoria West won the league honors last year under the piloting of Tommy Restell, playing manager. Restell may retain his official position this year, but if he does not wish to it is expected Scotty Robinson will take over the post.

Murder Trial Continues

New Meaning Given Statement by Myles

The inference: Ronald Albin Myles made the statement "I did it, sir," in answer to Constable William Stark's question, "Did you phone for the police?" was made yesterday afternoon by the accused sailor as he took the stand in a trial within the trial at which he stands charged with the murder of his wife.

During yesterday morning's session, Constable Stark had quoted Myles' statement as an answer to the question, "What happened?" put to the accused after he, Myles, had said "My wife is lying on the floor."

Myles, a leading seaman in the Royal Canadian Navy, was charged and committed for trial as the result of the death of Edith Alice Myles at their Esquimalt Road home on the night of August 30.

Yesterday afternoon, with the jury behind locked doors, the court heard J. B. Clearihue, K.C., crown prosecutor, and Stuart Henderson, defence counsel, cite authorities for and against the admissibility of statements made by Myles to Constable Stark. Judgment was reserved on the point until today by Mr. Justice Smith presiding over the Assizes here.

When the hearing resumed yesterday afternoon, Mr. Clearihue recalled Constable Stark to the stand to ask if the accused was under arrest while the constable was with him.

"No," the constable replied.

"Had you intimated to him he might be put under arrest?" Mr. Clearihue asked.

"No," the constable added.

Mr. Henderson put the accused on the stand and questioned him on actions and statements in the presence of the constable.

"I heard the doorbell ring and answered the door," Myles stated, as he explained the manner in which he received the constable.

He (Constable Stark) said 'Did you phone for the police?'

"I said 'Yes, I did it sir. Will you come in?'

"I opened the door and he stepped in and stood facing me. He said 'What's the trouble?'

"I said 'My wife is lying on the floor. I think you are too late.'

"He said 'Where?' and I said 'Back there,' motioning towards the back of the house."

Witness testified dining-room and kitchen doors were open and the constable could see through to where the body was lying. He stated he had followed Constable Stark into the kitchen, where the constable felt his wife's forehead.

"He went to the telephone and said 'Come with me.' I stayed beside the door of the hall. I heard him say 'Chief—I didn't get the exact words of the call. When he told me to come with him I got quite excited, I didn't know what he was going to do with me.'

Witness said the constable had become excited too, and had come into the kitchen with the phone book looking for the name Callum. Myles said he had told the police officer the name was Dr. McCallum and that he lived across the road.

The Esquimalt chief of police had arrived and instructed the constable to go for the doctor and Constable Stark had gone, returning in two or three minutes. The doctor had examined the body and the chief had given Constable Stark instructions to take Myles to the city jail, witness continued. He recognized Constable Stark as a police officer, he said.

"Did he at any time warn you?" asked Mr. Henderson.

"No. Not at all," the accused replied.

He said he believed the time intervening from the call to the police to his departure for the city jail was at least 10 minutes.

In reply to cross-examination by Mr. Clearihue the witness stated:

"During the whole evening there was nothing actually said about arrest."

Constable Gilbert Stancombe stated the accused and Constable Stark had left the Myles home by 10:30 when he arrived.

Dr. J. S. McCallum testified to his call to the home and said he was in the house roughly between five or 10 minutes before Stark and the accused left.

Counsel then proceeded with argument and citations covering the point of admissibility. The jury was excluded throughout the evidence on the statements.

MOTHERS' UNION

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — The quarterly meeting of the Shawnigan Lake branch of the Mothers' Union was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. Sutton. The election for enrolling member resulted in the unanimous return of Mrs. Gibson. A report of the year's work was given by Mrs. Gibson. A letter was read from the diocesan president announcing a general meeting in Victoria, October 23. A letter was also read from the Dominion president, Mrs. Florence Ward-Priore, urging continual support from the members to the Empire's cause by the purchase of war stamps.

Miss Lonsdale, who recently returned from England, gave a talk on conditions there.

'Guild' System Urged As Models for Reform By Catholic Prelates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sixteen prelates of the Catholic Church in America have called for the re-establishment of a "guild" system, "which will bind men together in society according to their respective occupations, thus creating moral unity."

With this, they declared, "a reform of morals and a profound renewal of the Christian spirit" will aid the nation to effect social reconstruction.

Under the "guild or corporative system," both employers and employees would be organized (as Pope Pius XI suggested) "not according to the position they occupy in the labor market, but according to the diverse functions which they exercise in society."

"Guilds governed the craftsmen of Europe during the Middle Ages."

EXTREMES ARE REJECTED

Rejecting both "extreme individualism" and "collectivism" in government policy, the archbishops and bishops who comprise the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference declared:

"Our economic life must be reorganized not on the disintegrating principles of individualism but on the constructive principle of social and moral unity among the members of human society."

In "The Church and the Social Order," a 34-page statement on conditions in the United States, the prelates presented what Catholic sources considered their response to the recent encyclical which Pope Pius XII addressed to the church in the United States.

The N.C.W.C. called it "the most important utterance made by the Catholic hierarchy since the bishops' program of reconstruction of 1919."

The prelates declared that:

The state must regulate the social responsibility of property so that the burden of providing for the common good is equitably distributed.

To protect its rights, labor must be free to bargain collectively, but "the principle of force" is equally wrong when used by labor or capital.

JOINT RESPONSIBILITY CHARGED

"Security of the workingman as against unemployment, old age, sickness, accident and death, must be frankly accepted as a social responsibility of industry jointly with society."

A living wage must provide decent support both for the workingman and his family, and must make possible savings to

Prelates who signed the document were:

Samuel A. Stritch, Archbishop of Chicago (chairman); John Gregory Murray, Archbishop of St. Paul; Joseph F. Rummel, Archbishop of New Orleans; John Mark Gannon, Bishop of Erie; Hugh C. Boyle, Bishop of Pittsburgh; Francis C. Kelley, Bishop of Oklahoma City-Tulsa; John B. Peterson, Bishop of Manchester; Edwin V. O'Hara, Bishop of Kansas City; John A. Duffy, Bishop of Buffalo.

Edward F. Hoban, Bishop of Rockford; Emmet M. Walsh, Bishop of Charleston; Karl J. Alter, Bishop of Toledo; Charles Hubert Le Blond, Bishop of St. Joseph; Francis P. Keough, Bishop of Providence; Walter A. Foey, Bishop of Syracuse, and Bartholomew J. Eustace, Bishop of Camden.

5 CONTROVERSIAL CENTRES

"We must bring God back into government," they declared, "... we must bring God back indeed into all life, private and public, individual and social."

The prelates listed five questions around which most controversial centres today—ownership, property and labor, security, wages, establishment of social order—and presented "Catholic doctrine regulating these matters," following the exposition given by Pope Pius XI in his celebrated encyclical:

Here is the gist of their discussion:

OWNERSHIP:

The church always has defended the right to own private property. But ownership has a two-fold aspect: One affecting the individual, the other affecting society.

Two great dangers face society: The concentration of ownership and control of wealth, and its anonymous character result ing from some business and corporation law. Therefore, the civil authority must regulate the responsibility of property so that the burden of providing for the common good is equitably distributed.

It must establish conditions so that each individual may surely and justly come into possession of material goods necessary to his own livelihood.

PROPERTY AND LABOR:

Machine industry has developed an intensification of the individualistic spirit, creating new problems for labor. It is freely admitted that modern industry requires considerable concentration of capital, but it is not admitted that concentration of own ownership and control is necessary or beneficial.

In too many instances, an undue portion of the income has been claimed by those who own or control capital, while those who labor have been forced to accept unreasonable working conditions and unfair wages.

Labor can have no effective voice as long as it is unorganized. It must be free to bargain collectively through its chosen representatives.

The idea that a laborer should be paid only enough to keep him efficient and reproducing his kind is vicious.

New developments in the organization of labor make it necessary to point out that the principle of force and domination is equally wrong if exercised by labor under conditions of monopoly-control. The most immediate problem in labor relations is "the abuse of power, which not infrequently results in violence, riot or disorder." Both employers and employees have been guilty sometimes.

Wealth should be distributed in such a way that "the good of the whole community" is safe guarded.

SECURITY:

Private property is not well distributed at present among the members of human society. Social stability rests upon the basis of individual ownership of property. There should be more of it and not less of it, if our existing economic system is to remain secure.

Our country possesses adequate resources to provide both a high standard of living and comprehensive security for all classes of society. Workingmen should be made secure against unemployment, sickness, accident, old age and death. The first line of defence against these hazards is possession of private property. Wages should provide both a living and security. But, at present, some form of government subsidy seems a necessary part of a program of security.

The economic system itself must help achieve security through a fair distribution of income. To this end, higher wages as a rule should come out of excessive profits and not out of increased prices.

WAGES:

The first claim of labor—which takes priority over owners' claims to profit—is the right to a living wage, "sufficient not merely for the decent support of the workingman himself but also of his family." The living wage also must cover "no merely present necessities" but some saving-money.

If unfair competition makes the payment of a living wage impossible, those responsible are guilty of wrongdoing. The remedy lies first in the adequate organization of both employers and employees and, second, in adequate regulation by the state.

Since wages are dependent on prices, it is pointed out that the economic organization cannot function well if the price level is frequently changing.

The first requirement is that the lowest-paid workingmen be the first to receive an increase of wages and that prices be not raised but excessive profits reduced. A sufficient income to the workingman is necessary to the smooth functioning of the economic system.

ESTABLISHMENT OF SOCIAL ORDER:

It would be unreasonable to expect that an economic system predicated on false principles over many decades could be reorganized suddenly. We frankly recognize that a full restoration to a Christian social order is a matter of steady growth and not a sudden transition.

The "extreme individualists" want no interference whatsoever from either government or social pressure. They wish to be liberated from all social responsibility.

On the other extreme are those who desire to socialize all resources or establish a state col-

Hokanson Earns Laurels Here

Randolph Hokanson, brilliant and promising young Seattle pianist, returned last night to Victoria, where he was given his start on the road to success by Mrs. J. O. Cameron, who six years ago brought him here to meet Harold Samuel, famed English exponent of Bach, who has since died.

In a formal program in the Empress Hotel ballroom, Mr. Hokanson, by his gracious manner, his undoubted ability, his technique and his mastery of his chosen instrument, merited the storms of applause with which a capacity audience rewarded him.

Delighted he appeared to be and he had good reason. His first really big program, the start of his first concert tour, in the city he has always regarded as the one that gave him his first real opportunity, was to him a highlight of his young career. To musical Victoria, also, it was an event, for this city will follow young Hokanson's rise in the world of music with as much interest as Seattle.

WELL DONE

His program was happily chosen. One of Mr. Hokanson's chief attributes is that he is evidently hot over ambitious, as are too many young musicians. He stayed well within his bounds and, as a result, the program was beautifully done and a joy.

Beethoven's great Sonata in C minor—allegro di molto e con brio; adagio cantabile, rondo-allegro—he did with the hands of a master. Into his interpretation he puts his full soul. Particularly was this noticeable in the second movement, with its lovely melody.

HESS ARRANGEMENT

The opening number on the program was Domenico Scarlatti's Sonata in G Major and then followed Myra Hess's arrangement of Bach's Adagio from Organ Toccata in C major. Mr. Samuel's careful coaching in his favorite composer was very evident in this. How proud would Mr. Samuel have been to have been in Victoria to hear the young man he did so much to help, give his first formal concert. There were few in the audience who did not think, with happy memories, of the pleasant little Englishman who did so much for Victoria's music in years gone by.

Chopin was the composer with which Mr. Hokanson opened his third group. In this were three delightful opportunities for the levity. Persecution is the logical and inevitable result of such economic dictatorship.

The true remedy will be found, according to Pope Pius XI, in two reforms:

Re-establishing some form of guild of vocational groups which will bind men together in society according to their respective occupations, thus creating moral unity.

A reform of morals and a profound renewal of the Christian spirit which must precede the social reconstruction.

young artist to show his talents—Value, A Flat; Nocturne, D Flat, and Ballade in F Minor. They were happily played, with imagination and perfect tone memory.

Debussy is essential to any well-rounded-out concert, and his "Minstrels," as played by Mr. Hokanson had warmth and reality. Ravel's Toccata from "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Gabriel Faure's Impromptu No. 2, F Minor, and "El Puerto" from "Iberia" (Albeniz) showed Mr. Hokanson had studied well and yet was not too studied.

Industry is such an important part of any musician's life. Without it he is doomed to failure. Mr. Hokanson has that virtue, as shown by his program. It was plainly seen he had put in hours of study since he was last here. Yet hours more are needed to make the finished artist. The Victoria musical world is confident he will become just that.

Mrs. Cameron told the audience that Mr. Hokanson would come again to Victoria next month to play with Gertrude Huntly Green (who was in last night's audience) in a benefit performance for Patsy Swift, young Victoria singer, who is doing well in study in Chicago.

The daily ration of air breathed by a man is 17,600 pints.

dent of the Victoria Musical Art Society, who brought Mr. Hokanson here, told of plans for the coming season and stressed the importance of music in such worrying times as the present.

MUSICAL SOCIETY HAS FINE PROGRAM

As an important part of its work, the Musical Art Society makes it possible for all ages of young students to enjoy the six concerts of the season at a very nominal fee. The season this year includes concerts by Gertrude Huntly Green, leading Canadian pianist; Mary Bucklin Hammond, cellist; Pierre Timp, baritone; the Elizabethan Singers, Maquinna Daniels, pianist; a group of the younger musicians, including Peggy Walton, soprano; John Pepper, violinist, and Marie Thiesen, pianist. The opening concert was given last night by Randolph Hokanson. All the concerts will be given in the Empress Hotel at 8:30. Tickets for the season or for individual concerts may be obtained at Fletcher Bros.

The daily ration of air breathed by a man is 17,600 pints.

Return Verdict Of Gross Neglect

A coroner's jury returned a verdict of culpable neglect on the part of the driver of the motorcycle at an inquest this morning by Coroner E. C. Hart at McCall's Funeral Parlors on the death of Private Earl McMillan, who died Tuesday of injuries he received in an accident on Dallas Road.

Private McMillan was injured when a motorcycle and sidecar, in which he was riding, collided with a lamp standard on Dallas Road near Eberts Street. The driver of the motorcycle, Private D. W. McMahan, was uninjured.

In his testimony, Private McMillan stated that he was traveling along Dallas Road at 15 miles per hour. He must have struck a bump in the road for the machine was thrown out of control, careening to the opposite side of the road and up onto the grass. He tried to apply the brakes but they would not function. He swerved out, but was too late to avoid the lamp standard.

The witness said he had been driving a motorcycle off and on for the past five years, but admitted he had not driven nor had had any instruction in the operation of this particular type of motorcycle. Neither he nor the deceased were on duty at the time.

Constable Harry Mercer said that tire marks on the grass continued 75 feet west of the post on the opposite side of the street from the path of the machine. The post is seven and a half feet from the edge of the road.

Corporal R. Carson, who serviced the motorcycle, said that upon examining the motorcycle after the impact, he found the brakes to be in good order.

Members of the jury were R. Shanks, foreman; A. T. Speed, F. E. Bailey, H. Gladding, H. Walker and H. Sabiston.

PRISONER OF WAR FOOLS GERMANS

An incident of the last war, smacking much of the "tell it to the marines" letter of a present prisoner of war in Germany, was related yesterday by C. French of this city. As did the recently publicized letter pass the German censor, so did a similar one, received by Mr. French from his son, Ernest, then a German prisoner.

In this note to his father, Ernest remarked upon the good quality and variety of food received by prisoners in the internment camp, stating at the end of the letter that they always took a "large grain of salt" with their meals.

But this particular piece of correspondence was only one of the many interchanges that completely fooled German censors time and again. The story had its beginning in the early days of the war when Mr. French's son, who is now president of the Toronto Flying Club, was training in England to be an aviator. One evening while he was on leave in London, he stayed at the Hotel Cecil, and before retiring asked the hotel porter to wake him if there should be a German Zeppelein raid on the British capital.

There was one, and the porter was so excited that he forgot to wake the young aviator, who slept right through it. He never did see a London raid, for soon he went to France, and had not been there long until he had the misfortune to be shot down and taken prisoner behind German lines.

Soon after Ernest French's capture, there was another raid on London, this time some of the Zeppelins being shot down on their return flight over France. To convey the news, which had been suppressed in Germany, his father wrote a letter that followed these lines: Do you remember the delicious feed of sausages we had one night at the Hotel Cecil, and how you were prevented from partaking of them? Recently we had another similar feed, and after we had finished, a funny thing happened. When the waiter was taking the uneaten sausages back to the kitchen, Mme. Duranthon (a French lady friend of the French family) poodle jumped up and grabbed no less than three.

In his reply, Ernest French mentioned in his note that if their car would not run, they should try heating the carburetor. Upon reading this, they put the letter in a hot oven and invisible writing between the lines carbonized, letting them read the real message. In this way, taking ordinary every day events of life, and using them as a code, both father and son outwitted the German authorities in every letter exchanged.

SPECIAL TRAINING FOR MILITIAMEN

Special training classes for officers and N.C.O.'s will be started by the 3rd Battalion, Canadian Scottish Regiment, N.P.M., Lieut.-Col. Brooke Stephenson, officer commanding.

Men taking these courses will be required to take lectures an extra one or two nights a week.

Examinations will be in December and on the results of these men will qualify for the higher ranks.

Col. Stephenson said there was nothing to the rumors that all ranks will have to increase their training to four nights a week. He also said there was nothing official in the report that militiamen would have to go back to camp for another month's training.

German Youth Taught Brutality

Thousands and thousands of German youths were enthusiastically risking their lives to carry out the brutal policy of their leaders, Dean Spencer Elliott said in an address last night to the 50th annual Presbyterian Synod of British Columbia.

These young men of Germany were not being forced against their will to obey orders. It was only by drilling in a doctrine contrary to the Christian faith and hostile to the decencies of civilization, that they had come into this state of mind.

"We cannot stand against this strong force if our teaching of the truth about God in Jesus Christ is casual, conventional and unconvincing," the Dean said. "A great heritage has been handed down to us by those forefathers who built up the greatness of the Christian empire, and we are responsible before God for handing on to our children the very best that has been committed to our trust."

The service was conducted by the newly-elected moderator, Rev. J. McTavish. He was assisted by Rev. J. B. Skene, Vancouver.

Yesterday morning, Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was conducted by Rev. E. Barnes, Duncan, and Rev. J. Mackie Niven, Victoria. Rev. A. E. Whitehouse, D.D., brought the greetings of the Victoria Ministerial Association to the meeting.

Rev. F. R. Frizell, in his report, in the afternoon, on missions, stated that the fields were all in good standing, and that there would be no curtailment of the work.

Rev. D. A. Smith, Vancouver, was appointed supervisor of the synod mission fields. Mr. C. Gordon reported that the allocation for the ensuing year for the budget is $15,000.

The synod received with much regret the resignation of the clerk, Rev. S. Lundy, Sooke. Mr. Lundy has served with the synod in this office for many years.

At the session this afternoon, resolutions were passed giving the support of the synod to His Majesty's government in this time of grave world crisis, and of loyal affection to King George and Queen Elizabeth.

The synod commanded the British and Foreign Bible Society for presentation of New Testament scriptures to the troops.

Thanks were moved to Dean Elliott, the session, choir and organist of St. Andrew's Church, the press and the hostesses who opened their homes for the entertainment of the commissioners.

Soldier Sees Wrong Kind of Action

Private Ralph Workman's desire to see action was fulfilled last night.

This morning he faced Magistrate Hall in the police court. Workman's notion of action overnight, evidence in police court this morning showed, was to hurl a bottle through a plate glass window of David Spencer Limited.

Workman went into action, too. Workman spent the night in the Victoria City Jail and this morning pleaded guilty to a charge of doing wilful damage to property. He was remanded for sentence tomorrow.

Murder Trial Continues

Statements Are Given to Jury

Alleged statements by Ronald Albin Myles to Esquimalt Constable William Stark were admitted today in Myles' trial for the murder of his wife, Edith Alice, at their home, 1329 Esquimalt Road, on the night of August 30.

Admissibility of the evidence was challenged yesterday by Stuart Henderson and led to the exclusion of the jury for a trial within a trial.

Mr. Justice Smith, presiding over the assizes, today ruled the statements should go before the jury, sustaining the position taken by J. B. Clearihue, K.C., crown prosecutor.

Scarcely had that decision been announced and the jury returned when it was excluded again for a second trial within a trial to decide whether or not statements allegedly made by Myles to Chief of Police H. C. V. Pecknold should be allowed in.

The jury heard Constable Stark repeat the evidence he gave yesterday, including the alleged statement by Myles: "I did it, Sir."

Chief Pecknold took the stand and testified he had followed Constable Stark to the Myles' home shortly after 10:30, had seen the body of a woman lying in the kitchen, had presumed she was dead after a brief examination, and had sent Constable Stark for the doctor.

The chief said he had been left alone with Myles, who appeared calm and collected, and a conversation ensued.

At that point Mr. Henderson again objected to evidence on the conversation and the jury was excused.

"I spoke to the accused," Chief Pecknold testified. "I said, 'What happened, old man?' He said, 'I arrived home at 8:45 this evening. We had an argument. I choked her.'

Immediately after those words Constable Stark had returned with Dr. McCallum who examined the body and expressed the opinion the woman had been dead about two hours, Chief Pecknold said.

He then instructed Constable Stark to take the accused to the police station.

At 1:40 August 31 he had gone to the station and in the presence of G. H. Sedger, municipal solicitor, Constable Gilbert Stancombe, T. H. Bamford, court stenographer, and City Detective P. W. Richards, had laid the formal charge of murder. He had warned the accused he need not make a statement but that if he did it could be taken down and used in evidence.

Accused had replied: "This is a very old case and I have no evidence to get a divorce. That's all," the chief testified.

In reply to questions by Mr. Henderson, the chief stated he had had no knowledge of a crime prior to the statement by the accused he had choked his wife. Up to that time he would have allowed the accused to leave the house had Myles wished. After that he admitted, Myles was practically under arrest.

The exact statement made by the accused in the police station, resolutions were passed giving the support of the synod to His Majesty's government in this time of grave world crisis, and of loyal affection to King George and Queen Elizabeth.

The hearing was adjourned to 2:15.

The annual meeting of the British Columbia Historical Association will be held in the Provincial Library, Parliament Buildings, on Friday at 8:15. The president's address will be delivered by Dr. T. A. Rickard, his subject being: "The Strait of Anian." Reports upon the activities of the association during the past year will be submitted to the meeting by the secretary, the treasurer, and the editor of the British Columbia Historical Quarterly.

ABANDON FLAT RACES LONDON (CP) — Abandoning of a number of flat race meetings owing to the uncertainty as to racing at Newmarket in south England, was announced yesterday.

Those abandoned included the Newmarket Cambridgeshire meeting October 16 at which a substitute St. Leger was to have been run.

Herbert Anscomb, M.P.P., urged the association to pursue its organization work intensively. Brigadier J. Sutherland Brown presided as president.

COACHES MARLBOROS TORONTO (CP) — Reg (Red) Horner, former Toronto Maple Leaf defenceman who retired from active participation after last season's National Hockey League schedule, will coach Toronto Marlboros of the Senior Ontario Hockey Association this year.

He disputed the assertion of the Minister of Public Works that highways were in good condition.

Tomorrow night the distinguished English artists, Allan Wilkie and Miss Freda Wyde Hunter-Watson will present the first of a series of six Shakespearean entertainments at the Victoria Truth Centre, 734 Fort Street, at 8.30. OUR BOARDING HOUSE, with Major HoopleBoots and Her Buddies*Wash Tub*Mr. and Mrs.*Alley Oop*Freckles and His Friends*Bringing Up Father*CUT OUR WAY—*By Williams*By Martin*By Arthur Feltwell and Ellison Hoover*By V. T. Hamlin*By Merrill Blosser*By George McManus*Uncle Ray*Possible Reasons for Pictures in Caves

Hundreds of paintings and engravings have been found in caves of Europe, and the question comes, "Why did Stone Age artists make those pictures?"

The answer is not certainly known. People of the Stone Age had no alphabet to use in writing down facts about their work.

The best we can do is to try to figure out possible reasons. The pictures are there, and we can make an effort to explain them.

Two Stone Age pictures. The lower one is of a wolf. Above is a figure believed to show a medicine man in disguise.

It is possible that some of the artists worked just for the pleasure of doing so. In long winter evenings, they may have found it amusing to see how well they could make images of animals they had seen.

That is only one of several possible reasons why artists spent hours or days on outlines of bison, reindeer and other animals.

It is likely that some artists had different reasons, connected with hunting or religion.

Here and there in a cave, we find marks on the walls which probably were made by stone-pointed spears. Often the marks are inside the outlines of game animals.

We may suppose that Stone Age hunters practiced throwing spears at images of beasts. By this practice they may have hoped to improve their skill for the next time they went hunting.

Quite a number of the pictures are life-size or nearly so. They may have been used in contests to show how well different members of the tribe could hurl spears from a distance of, say, 15 or 20 feet.

More common, perhaps, was the making of pictures which had to do with religion. Among the American Indians, animals were used as "totems," and each was held to be sacred by a special clan.

Only a few Stone Age pictures show the outlines of people. The artists seem to have been much more interested in animals than in human beings.

One picture in the Cave of Three Brothers in France is of much interest. It seems to be an outline of a man dressed to imitate an animal. Perhaps he was a Stone Age "medicine man."

HOROSCOPE

Friday, October 11

This is not an important day in planetary direction, for it bodes ill for well-balanced judgment and seems to presage the sort of indecision that thwarts important initiative of all sorts.

Astrologers emphasize the importance of adjusting the scale of living for necessary future entrenchments. Stress is placed upon the wisdom of enjoying all the benefits of the present to the fullest extent. This means that homes should be made the center of informal entertainment. Comfort should be sought instead of luxury.

Mars and Neptune near the ascendant in France warn of unrest among the conquered people. As a nation they will survive defeat, demonstrating their ability to retain distinctive characteristics. The remaking of Europe is to retain its new pattern for only a limited period, astrologers foretell. The winter, however, will bring terrible tests to many thousands of war victims.

Persons whose birthdate is the augury of a year of steady good luck, but speculation will be unfortunate. Women should conserve their money.

Children born on this day probably will be rather difficult to understand. These Libra natives may be moody, sensitive and highstrung, but exceedingly intelligent.

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am a freshman in college. I like school very much but I love a girl better. If I marry the girl, her father will give me a fine position with his firm. Is it not true that one can become educated in meeting the happenings of everyday life? Shall I marry this girl or go on to college?

R.E.M.

Answer: I am not in favor of young marriages because boys and girls in their teens are not sufficiently mature to know what kind of life partners they are going to need when they are grown. Neither at that age are capable of a deep and abiding love.

My advice to you is to wait a while until your tastes are formed and you have tested out the strength of your affection for this girl. Don't marry her because her father can give you a good position with his firm. If you are a smart young fellow, you will be able to get yourself a job that will give you independence. Sometimes the son-in-law job puts a chap in a hot spot.

DEAR MISS DIX—I am a girl of 16 and I am trying to prepare myself to make some man a good wife some day. I have learned to sew and cook, and now I want to study home economy, budgeting and the financial problems of housekeeping. Where can I get some books on this subject?

Answer: Your bank will show you how to run a budget, and your librarian will advise you about the best books on home economics.

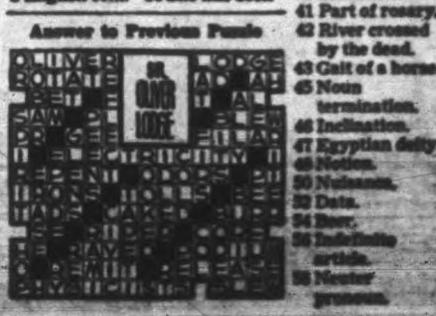

But what a wife you will make, and how lucky will be the man who will get you! Fancy a bride who will have prepared herself for the matrimonial career beforehand, and who will not have to learn how to cook at the expense of her poor husband's stomach, nor throw half of his salary into the garbage can! I should think you would have a line of suitors that would stretch around the block.

Indigestion Gone Feels Fine Again

"Mosby's Tonic Is Splendid," Says Well-known Vancouver Man — Suffered With Sharp Pains Due to Gas — Felt So Worn Out Could Hardly Work — Now Relates How Mosby's Tonic Gave Splendid Relief

"I never would have believed there WAS such a medicine!" That is what people are saying about MOSBY'S TONIC all over Vancouver and throughout this entire vicinity. This is the mixture of Roots and Herbs and Other Splendid Medicinal Ingredients, now being introduced to the public daily in this city at the Cunningham Drug Stores. Some of the best-known residents of Victoria and this whole section are coming forward daily with sincere statements, publicly endorsing this New, Scientific Compound.

MR. E. JONES public daily in this city at the Cunningham Drug Stores. Some of the best-known residents of Victoria and this whole section are coming forward daily with sincere statements, publicly endorsing this New, Scientific Compound.

The earth gets less than a 2,000,000th part of the energy radiated by the sun.

Describes Relief From Indigestion Pains

Among the many people who praise Mosby's Tonic, none is more enthusiastic than Mr. R. Jones, 303 Georgia St. East, Vancouver. Mr. Jones is a well-known local citizen. Read what he has to say about this Splendid Medicine. His statement follows:

"I got such splendid relief from Mosby's Tonic that I gladly give my statement, endorsing this medicine, and I hope what I say here will help many others," said Mr. Jones. "For a long time I suffered with violent spells of indigestion and felt so weak and exhausted all the time that I could hardly do my work. It just seemed like I had no energy at all."

"I read so much about Mosby's Tonic and so many people had recommended it that finally I made up my mind to try it. Will say that I could see results from the VERY FIRST. So I kept on with it and now I feel like a DIFFERENT PERSON. It removes those sharp indigestion pains, and now I feel fine. I have more energy now than I had in a long time. This medicine is ALL THAT IT CLAIMS. I gladly give my statement endorsing it to others."

Acts on Bowels, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys

MOSBY'S TONIC accomplishes several things within the human body at the same time. That is because it contains 20 ingredients, including 20 Roots and Herbs. It cleanses the bowels and clears gas and blood from stomach. It calms the liver, cleanse the kidneys and sick headache. It invigorates the kidney action, thus preventing indigestion. Weak, worn out people soon feel the different new energy.

MOSBY'S TONIC is sold in Victoria at THE CUNNINGHAM DRUG STORES, Fort and Douglas Sts., and also sold by all leading drugstores throughout Victoria and Vancouver Island.

First B.C. Eggs Sent to Britain

Eggs from British Columbia are going to the United Kingdom for the first time.

In Vancouver today a shipment of 22,000 cases is being loaded for transport by train to the Atlantic coast for transhipment across the Atlantic.

E. G. Rowbottom, deputy minister of trade and industry, said here the shipment was made possible by a 15-cent reduction in rail freight rates to the east arranged through E. E. Bucklefield of Bucklefield's Limited.

The trade and industry department, through its trade commissioner, has been working for a long time on plans to promote the egg trade to the U.K. Mr. Rowbottom said and many problems have been overcome.

"This movement," he said, "may be the forerunner of big business for the province and comes at a time when the United Kingdom faces an emergency situation, with all supplies from Denmark and nearly every other European country cut off completely."

Prof. E. A. Lloyd, head of the U.B.C. poultry department, is in the city today conferring with R. S. O'Meara, trade extension commissioner, and heads of the agriculture and trade departments on plans to make the trade permanent.

Hon. W. J. Asselstine, trade and industry minister, expressed satisfaction with the present shipment but added there were numerous problems to be met to ensure a real export future for the industry.

GARDEN CITY

The Carey Red Cross unit met in Garden City United Church on Tuesday under the presidency of Mrs. W. P. Brown. Considerable quantities of completed work were brought in and donations of clothing acknowledged. A message of appreciation from Red Cross headquarters was read by Mrs. W. P. Brown. Arrangements were made to hold a silver tea on the afternoon of Wednesday, October 22, at the home of Mrs. A. P. Fryatt, Snowdrop Avenue, proceeds to be devoted to Red Cross effort. Mrs. Barnes will speak of her experience as a passenger of the ill-fated Athenia, torpedoed at the beginning of the war.

VICTORIANS READY—All decked out in brand new serge battle dresses these 21-year-olds from Victoria are prepared at Gordon Head Camp to step through the army paces. Front row, left to right: F. HAVE A DRINK ON ME, BOYS—But it's got to be a "coke" or something of the soft drink variety in the Canadian Legion War Services canteen at Gordon Head. Beer and alcoholic beverages of all kinds are barred, even in the officers' mess. All chocolate bars were sold out by night.

Trainees Make Friends As Camp Life Starts

Mill workers, store clerks, carpenters, auto mechanics, bank clerks and young loggers fraternized at Gordon Head today in the common bond of the Canadian army's serge battle dress.

The 21-year-olds from all ranks of life called up for compulsory military training spent most of their first day in camp making friends with their hut mates and swapping ideas about their 30 days of compulsory service.

A veteran sergeant, playing "father" to a group of young Victorians in one hut, put it this way:

"The army is built on co-operation. It isn't a competition. Your idea is not to get ahead of the other fellow. It is to pull together so that everyone gets along at the same pace. Try that and you'll find it works fine."

The young recruits, still feeling a little self-conscious in their new uniforms, listened intently. They are taking the army business seriously.

They had their first parade this morning on a ground made slippery by yesterday's steady drizzle of rain.

CHANGE OF CLOTHING

But wet clothes will not hinder them. They have been issued two uniforms, one serge and one drill; two sets of underwear, two shirts, three pairs of socks and two pairs of boots. Each hut is equipped with a drying room.

Most of the 105 Victorians among the 500 odd trainees went into camp yesterday afternoon.

They have already learned the first trick of a soldier, complaint about the "grub." It maybe they are not accustomed yet to the army's plain fare. At any rate the canteen completely sold out of chocolate bars and other edibles after dinner, which some say did not come up to expectations, based on the fine breakfast which they had on arrival.

FROM ALL PARTS

The Victoria men come from all parts of the city and many stations of life. Here are some of them: Stanley W. Bell, 944

NANAIMO—Charged by Game Warden Frank Greenfield with "pit-lamping" deer, R. E. Melius, Nanaimo, was sentenced to two months in jail by Magistrate C. H. Beever Potts yesterday. No option of fine was given. Evidence showed that the accused and Mr. and Mrs. George Banasky Jr. had been found on a blind road in the Buck and Turner logging area with flashlight, guns and ammunition in their possession. The party told the court they were merely on a joy ride.

Magistrate Potts said he believed witnesses had perjured themselves, that Banasky was fortunate no charge had been laid against him, and gave him a strong warning to never appear in such a case before him again.
